Four winners. Four stories. One unforgettable tournament.

The FIFA World Cup 2026 may have come to an end, but the excitement continued at Dextrans. More than 50 colleagues from across the Group took part in our World Cup Prediction Challenge, putting their football knowledge, research, and instincts to the test. From seasoned football fans to first-time predictors, participants embraced the competition and proved that anyone could have a winning strategy.

Kevin from Vietnam, Dextrans World Cup 2026 Winner

Our four champions each had a unique winning strategy. Tracy relied on research and instinct to take first place, Erika combined statistics with expert advice to finish second, Nia climbed from the bottom of the leaderboard to claim third, and Kevin drew on his passion for football to secure his place among the winners. Their stories prove that sometimes success comes from preparation, perseverance, and a little bit of luck.

VISITING CUSTOMS OFFICE IN JAKARTA PORT

At Dextrans, continuous learning is key to delivering excellent customer service. Our Indonesia Country Manager recently conducted a sales training session, followed by a visit to the local Customs Office to consult on one of our shipments and gain practical insights into customs procedures and regulatory requirements.

The visit reinforced the importance of compliance, coordination, and effective communication in international logistics. By combining training with real-world experience, the session strengthened the team's knowledge and further supported Dextrans' commitment to professional development and operational excellence.

SITE SURVEY : PREPARING FOR SHIPMENT'S ARRIVAL

Dextrans recently conducted a project shipment training session at a construction site, providing the team with practical experience in planning and coordinating complex logistics operations. The training highlighted the importance of understanding site conditions and working closely with all stakeholders.

A key challenge involved coordinating the reverse entry of container trucks into the site due to limited access. The operation required careful traffic planning, clear communication, and close coordination with the site team to ensure the containers could be positioned safely and efficiently without disrupting ongoing construction activities.

The team also addressed hollow ground caused by an underground basement, which affected container positioning. Despite the late notification of the site constraint, a practical solution was developed through close coordination, demonstrating the team's adaptability and problem-solving capabilities.

TECHNOLOGY IN MOTION SOLVING REAL PROBLEMS, NOT JUST DIGITIZING THEM

produced by: William Loekito

Technology should improve the way we work—not simply digitize inefficient processes. At Dextrans, every technology investment begins with one question: does it solve a real problem for our people or our customers? By focusing on practical outcomes rather than trends, we ensure every solution delivers meaningful value to our business and the customers we serve.

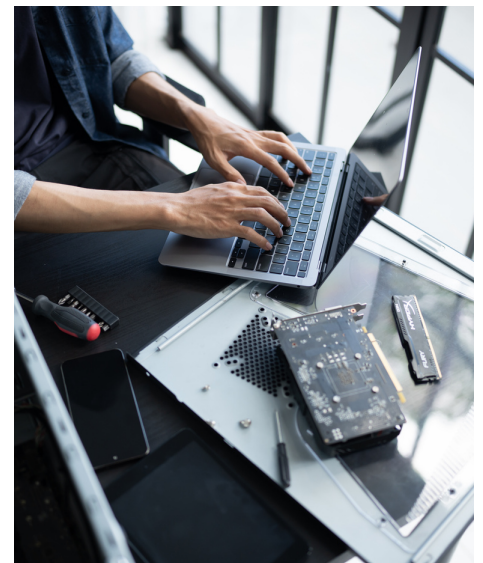

Whether it's CargoWise automation or AI-powered tools, every initiative is carefully evaluated before implementation. We ask whether it will reduce manual work, improve operational efficiency, enhance the customer experience, or strengthen our competitive advantage. This practical approach ensures every technology investment delivers measurable value and supports long-term business growth.

FROM FREIGHT FORWARDER TO STRATEGIC PARTNER

Dextrans is also redefining its role in the supply chain. Rather than becoming involved only when cargo is ready to move, we are expanding our support from the moment an order is placed, providing end-to-end visibility and coordination throughout the entire shipment journey.

By connecting every stage—from order placement and inventory visibility to transportation, customs, delivery, finance, and reporting—we create a more seamless and transparent supply chain experience. This end-to-end approach enables better coordination, improves visibility across every milestone, and helps customers make more informed decisions throughout the shipment journey.

This approach reduces handoffs, improves visibility, and provides a single point of accountability throughout the shipment lifecycle. More than a logistics provider, Dextrans continues to be a trusted partner that helps customers operate more efficiently.
